KENTUCKY AT THE FAIR.

Bluegrass Traditions Splendidly Upheld and the Reputation of the State Enhanced.

BY T. K. HEDRICK.

If you ask a Kentuckian what is the principal exhibit of his State at the fair, he probably will point in the general direction of the Administration building and say, "President Francis. President Francis is a Kentucky product, but as Missouri and the nation at large claim some proprietary interest in him, Kentucky has seen fit to make other representations exclusively her own."

The qualities and resources of the State are comprehensively and eloquently attested to in these exhibits, and citizens of Kentucky may well be proud of the showing made in every department to which the State has contributed, for it is represented in nearly every major part of the Exposition. In art, history, commerce, and in natural resources, Kentucky stands well forward.

A State of noble traditions and rich in storied memories of great deeds and great men, it has seen fit to subordinate these in some degree to matters of more present moment, deeming it advisable to show the world not so much what Kentucky has done, as what it is doing and can do. Without any abandonment of those social features which have made her famous for open-hearted hospitality, Kentucky yet shows that she stands second to no locality in her commercial opportunities, nor the rewards she has to offer to individual effort rightly applied.

Accepting the keynote of the World's Fair, which is sounded as "an exhibition of processes," the State has got in harmony with the idea, and shows the full range of her powers. In the Palace of Agriculture, Kentucky's displays include an exhibition of hemp culture and manufacture, and all the evolutionary processes of the tobacco plant, from its growth to its manufacture into finished products which bring rosy dreams to the consumer of the "philosophic weed." And, of course, there are illustrations of what can be done with rye and corn, without which a Kentucky display would be incomplete.

Kentucky's display of clay in the Palace of Mines and Metallurgy is in itself a wonder-world. To him who has imagined that clay was used simply to make churns and jugs, this exhibit is a revelation. It is a liberal education in ceramics, and in the utilitarian uses of humble material in building, fireproofing and in art pottery. The rock quarries in operation, and the display of cannel coal, in the same building, further attest the riches that lie beneath the surface of the "dark and bloody ground."

The Kentuckian visiting the fair should not fail to take cognizance of these things, not to bear witness to what his State is doing in the way of education and art. In the Palace of Education is shown the development of the public school system of Louisville through a period of 115 years, and no less interesting the progress that has been made in the manual and literary education of the blind, as exemplified in the work of the pupils of the Kentucky School for the Blind.

Testifying to the artistry of the State, and showing that its worth has won recognition from the masters, are several pieces of statuary by Kentucky sculptors, which are incorporated in the decorations of the main buildings of the fair. Notable among these is a beautiful "Victory," by Miss Enid Yandell, of Louisville, crowning the dome of the Cascade restaurant building.

In the Palace of Fine Arts Kentucky is also well represented, but perhaps the State's best display of this nature is in the Kentucky

State Building, where it shows a complete and interesting art gallery of its own. Here are numerous fine canvasses by Hewitt Greene, Miss Thumb, and other artists, besides striking sculptural decorations and single pieces of statuary.

The building, "The new Kentucky Home," is the central feature of the State's exhibit at the fair. It is a magnificent structure, covering an area of 138 by 89 feet. Broad, graveled paths through the lawns of native bluegrass lead to the entrances, of which there are four. Wide porches, with symmetrical colonnades and sculptural ornaments, bespeak silently but eloquently the proverbial hospitality of the State, and seem to bid the passer-by to pause and rest here. The wayfarer who heeds this invitation and enters the building is at once made to feel "at home." The spirit of the place is fittingly symbolized by the State button, which bears a picture of the building, with the legend: "The Kentucky Home—It's part mine." Here pleasant hours may be spent under the guidance of the genial Secretary, Mr. R. H. Hughes, or of the fair hostess, Mrs. Smith, in viewing the social, artistic and sentimental sides of Kentucky life and manners.

In the richly furnished rooms of the first floor are displayed oil portraits of Kentucky's famous characters, as well as other specimens of native art. Pendant from the balcony of the second floor, and almost sweeping the carpet of the first, hangs a colossal and beautiful flag of silk, which possesses historic charm. It is the "home coming" flag of the battleship Kentucky, when that vessel was homeward bound from the Asiatic station, under command of Capt. William Mallory Berry, himself a Kentuckian. Upon the arrival of the Kentucky in home waters, her officers and crew sent the flag as a present to Gov. Beckham. Its beautiful folds show little effect of wear from its 13,000-mile journey across the seas. Elegant parlors, reception rooms, galleries of historical relics and specimens of native flora, make the second and third floors of the "home" well worth inspection.

But the "Kentucky Home" exists not merely for purposes of show. It is the scene of continuous entertainment of visitors, and many formal and informal receptions. Kentucky entertains lavishly. It was one of the two States which had the distinction of receiving the delegates to the International Press Parliament, and has entertained many visiting bodies, including the American Press Humorists.

With true Kentucky generosity the officers of the commission have tendered the use of the home for entertainment purposes to several States and Territories who have no official residence of their own on the grounds. Alabama, Colorado, and other sections have taken advantage of this offer.

A file of State papers and Kentucky books and periodicals is kept constantly on hand for the delectation of her sons and daughters, who may rest within the kindly precincts of the New Kentucky Home, and feel that in truth they are in a home environment. All in all, Kentucky has wrought at the fair worthily of herself, and her children doubtless will do their part in coming to view what she has prepared in their behalf.

SPENCER COOPER, : : : Editor.

HAZEL GREEN KY.
THURSDAY, June 30, : 1904.

A. T. COMBS is this week announced as a candidate for the office of Sheriff of Wolfe county, subject, of course, to the action of the Democratic party. He is too well known to need an introduction at our hands. But all the same it is well enough to remind the people that the "one-gallused orphan boy" made us as good a Sheriff as we ever had, and was always prompt in his settlement with the Auditor, though the people were not so prompt with him. Indeed, there are today many people in the county who still owe him taxes for the year 1901, and unless they find it in their hearts to pay him voluntarily they will always owe him, for he will not force a poor man to pay. He is too much that way for his own good, and for that many of his friends were opposed to his making the race, and the same friends today would rather he did not run. But he does his duty honestly and fearlessly, and never has involved the county in any trouble. For these reasons he will be a hard man to beat, if such a thing should be, but we commend him to the Democrats of the county and feel sure that when the time comes they will act on his credentials with due consideration of his character and qualifications, both of which are above reproach.

Tired Mothers.

It's hard work to take care of children and to cook, sweep, wash, sew and mend besides. Tired mothers should take Hood's Sarsaparilla—it refreshes the blood, improves the appetite, assures restful sleep.

The State Board of Health sends out a circular letter warning the people to take every precaution against an epidemic of typhoid fever. People are especially warned to screen out flies, or where this cannot be effectively done to keep all food covered up so that these pest may not come in contact with it. There were 13,305 cases of typhoid fever in Kentucky last year, and 1,579 deaths resulted. The cost of caring for those sick of it, to say nothing of the sorrow, suffering and loss of life, for the year, is reported at $963,740. The Board states that the disease is easily prevented if the people will guard against flies and drink pure water. Where a person contracts the disease the Board recommends that chloride of lime, eight ounces to the gallon of water, be freely used in the sick room in vessels. The sick room should be screened, and all bed clothing or that of the body to be treated by a solution of the chloride of lime. The circular is too lengthy to publish entire, but may be had for distribution by application to the Board at Bowling Green.

HON. JAMES A. MCKENZIE, more familiarly known as "Quinine Jim," and formerly United States Minister to Peru, and once a member of Congress, died at his home at Oak Grove, Christian county, Saturday morning at 5:25 o'clock as a result of a stroke of apoplexy sustained June 23d. Everybody who knew Jim McKenzie will read this bit of news with regret. He was a universal favorite, and immortalized himself when he made the fight for free quinine.

CABLEGRAMS bring the news that the Japanese are continually getting the better of the Russians. As late as the 23d inst. a battle between the two armies resulted in the killing, wounding and capture of 10,000 Russians. This was between the land forces, the defeated army being that of Gen. Stakelberg. On top of this a fight between the fleets of the opposing forces at the mouth of the harbor at Port Arthur resulted in the destruction of one of the finest war vessels of the Russians, and the disabling of another. The vessel destroyed had a crew of 750, all of whom perished. A detachment of the Taku Shan army surprised and routed a squadron of Russian cavalry on the same date and took possession of the heights at San Tao Kow. In the battle of Fa Van Gow the Russian loss was 2,736 men.

The impression that I had withdrawn from the race for State Senator has been so pronounced that some of my friends have called upon me to remonstrate against such an action. I did not withdraw, had no idea of doing so, but dropped out my announcement because I needed the space for other matter. Now, to my friends, and all others who contemplate supporting me, I wish to say, that I am still in the race and intend to stick it out. Without egotism I think I can say with truthfulness that I have done as much for the Democratic party and been as true to the mountain people generally as any man in the district. I need the office for the emoluments and believing I have honestly earned it, I ask the Democrats of the entire district to give me their support for the nomination.

Yours for Democratic success.
SPENCER COOPER.

Thanks, Brother, We Blush and Bow.

Mr. Spencer Cooper, the erudite editor of the Hazel Green Herald, has announced in his paper his candidacy for the office of Senator from his district. After years of service to the Democratic party, Mr. Cooper asks, "Is the laborer worthy of his hire?" In your case, Spence, this question is specially applicable, and can as readily be answered by saying that you should have everything coming to you, and if to that belongs the senatorship of your district it would be robbery and a heartless exhibition of ingratitude to defeat you in your just desert and aspiration for the office.—Jackson Hustler, Feb. 5.

Editor Cooper emphatically denies that he has withdrawn from the race for State Senator. Stick to it, Spence, and if your friends are friends they will see that you get what you want. Mr. Cooper authorizes the Hustler to announce his candidacy, which will be found in its proper place. If there ever was a party servant who is entitled to reward, that man is Spencer Cooper, and the Hustler thinks the party will not ignore this gentleman's aspirations to what he so richly deserves.—Jackson Hustler, June 24.

FOR SALE.—A fine heifer calf, red in color, and from the best milk stock on both sides. Apply at this office. She must be sold and can be had cheap.

W. W. QUICKSALL was appointed a notary public some time ago, but has not yet received his seal. But he will have one in a few days.

A reporter for THE HERALD dropped into John H. Rose's blacksmith shop Monday and found that gentleman and his able assistant, Charley Gosney, putting in a new 400 blower and forge. This was made necessary by the increased business, there being now in the yard several buggies, wagons, mowing machines, etc., needing repairs. With the new forge and blower Mr. Rose will double his heating capacity, and hopes soon to catch up with the work now pressing him.

Kidney trouble causes quick or unsteady heart beats, and makes one feel as though they had heart trouble, because the heart is over-working in pumping thick, kidney-poisoned blood through veins and arteries.

It used to be considered that only urinary troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all constitutional diseases have their beginning in kidney trouble.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes.
